

IN THIS BOAT

| by Manos Hatzidakis |

I'm all alone in this boat
this bright white bird is my only company
I throw a sign to the seashore, but then how can I say it to you you are a distant star, at night time I kiss you.

What Does Your Favorite Color Say About You?

RED: action oriented with a deep need for physical fulfillment & to experience life through the five senses.

ORANGE: great need to be with people, to socialize with them, & be accepted & respected as part of a group. You also have a need for challenges in your life, whether it is physical or social ones.

YELLOW: deep need for logical order in your everyday life & to be able to express your individuality by using your logical mind to inspire & create new ideas.

GREEN: deep need to belong, to love & be loved & to feel safe & secure. You need acceptance & acknowledgment for the everyday things you do for others, just a 'thank you' is sufficient.

BLUE: deep need to find inner peace & truth, to live their life according to their ideals & beliefs without having to change their inflexible viewpoint of life to satisfy others.

PURPLE | VIOLET: deep need for emotional security & to create order & perfection in all areas of your life, including your spiritual life. Need to initiate & participate in humanitarian projects, helping others in need.

PINK: need to be accepted & loved unconditionally.

TURQUOISE: need to create emotional balance in your life, to be able to express your hopes & dreams no matter how idealistic they may be & to make your own way in the world under your own terms.

MAGENTA: a non-conformist who sees life from a different point of view.

BROWN: a safe, secure, simple & comfortable existence with supportive family & friends.

BLACK: need for power & control in order to protect their own emotional insecurities.

WHITE: simplicity in life, independence & self-reliant so you do not need to depend on anyone else.

GRAY: you are the middle of the road type, cool, conserved, composed & reliable. You tend to conform just to keep the peace.

Sun Lounge

The retractable hydraulic swimming platform gives an easy access to & from the sea or to board the Castoldi jet tender for a quick ride to shore.

Ouzo

Ouzo is an anise-flavored aperitif that is widely consumed in Greece. Ouzo has its roots in tsipouro, which is said to have been the pet project of a group of 14th century monks living in a monastery on Mount Athos in southern part of Greece. One version of it was flavored with anise. This version eventually came to be called ouzo.

Modern ouzo distillation largely took off in the beginning of the 19th century following Greek independence, with production centered on the island of Lesbos, which claims to be the originator of the drink & remains a major producer. When absinthe fell into disfavor in the early 20th century, ouzo was one of the products whose popularity rose to fill the gap; it was once called "a substitute for absinthe without the wormwood". In 1932, ouzo producers developed a method of distillation using copper stills that is now the standard method of production.

Ouzo is traditionally mixed with water, becoming cloudy white, sometimes with a faint blue tinge, & served with ice cubes in a small glass. It can also be drunk straight from a shot glass. It is traditionally served with a small plate of a variety of appetizers called mezes, usually small fresh fish, octopus, sardines, calamari, salad, fried zucchini, clams fries, olives & feta cheese. Ouzo can be described to have a similar taste to absinthe which is liquorice-like, but smoother.

Greece won the right to label ouzo as an exclusively Greek product. The E.U now recognizes ouzo, as well as the Greek drinks tsipouro and tsikoudia, as products with a Protected Designation of Origin. In modern Greece, ouzerias (the suffix -erie is imported from French) can be found in nearly all cities, towns & villages. These cafe-like establishments serve ouzo with mezedes. It is traditionally slowly sipped together with mezedes shared with others over a period of several hours in the early evening.

One thing is for sure; the view from either is breathtaking. The two sun lounge areas in the bow and aft of Gitana, allow for seclusion & privacy or sunbathing with company, depending on one's desires.
